PUBLIC PROSECUTOR

v

CHEN HUNG, Chinese
British Dependent.

This twelfth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and thirty one.

This is an appeal by a Chinaman, CHEN HUNG, against his conviction by the Court of First Instance of Central District No. 1 on a charge of supplying liquor to natives.

The accused appeals against the conviction on the ground of mistaken identity or, in the alternative, if the conviction is upheld, against the amount of the fine.

This Court is satisfied that there is no mistake about the identity of the accused and the conviction is therefore upheld.

With regard to the amount of the fine the Court agrees to the sum proposed by the Public Prosecutor and the fine is accordingly reduced to 300 francs.
